MealMatch, an application designed to connecting lower income families to deals, is an idea I'm come up with that I hope to bring to the greater Cincinnati area. This project essentially breaks down to how we can help those who can't afford 15-20$ meals. They might be able to afford a 5-10$ meal, but they shouldn't have to scour the internet to find those deals. It should be easily accessible to them through 1 page and 1 search. From a societal and ethical standpoint, I hope my application can help those who need a hot meal, water, or shelter. We are looking to get more people off the streets and into shelters and areas where they can survive and thrive through these cold Cincy winters. While I do not see any legal concerns with MealMatch, there might be a chance that companies like Toogood Togo and others might catch traction as this plan is slightly similar except our goal is to give a free service that connects those with meals. All in all, we hope to match those in need to meals, water, and shelter throughout the year while maintaining a free SAAS model with only the need of internet access.
